Those who attended, thoroughly enjoyed the sessions, and thought it an enriching and meaningful seminar which all civil servants should be enabled to engage in, particularly, the decision-makers as the skillset and principles garnered will be translated within their working environments.

By the end of the Workshop, three working teams presented a partial draft behavioural plan, all highlighting to some degree the importance of “civil servants not accepting bribes” and the “public not offering bribes”.

Thanks to all who participated during the opening ceremony, the media who shared this important information with the public and all the attendees of the five-day seminar as well as their supervisors who allowed them to attend.
